On

The Psychological Impact of Natural Disasters

In Observance of the International Day for Mental Health (10 October) & the International Day for Natural Disaster Reduction (10 October)

11 October 2007

10:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m.

at the

Dag Hammarskjöld Library Auditorium

Background Information:

In the recent years, the world has been plagued with various disasters such as hurricanes, earthquakes, typhoons and tsunamis; the latter claiming about 229,866 lives. Human vulnerability, exacerbated by the lack of planning or lack of appropriate emergency management, leads to financial, structural, and human losses. The resulting loss depends on the capacity of the population to support or resist the disaster, their resilience. Although victims may recover from financial losses and other material losses, the psychological impacts of natural disasters often have long lasting effects on the victims. The briefing will look into the psychological impact of natural disasters and how organizations and humanitarian agencies can help survivors of natural disasters survive the trauma.

Dr. Gerard A. Jacobs, Director, Disaster Mental Health Institute

Ms. Anne Cubilie, Policy & Guidance Management Office, Policy Development & Studies Branch, United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA)

Mr. Nassim Agazade, Critical Incident Stress Management Unit, Department of Safety of Security, United Nations

Mr. Luis Alberto Amorós Nunez, Counsellor, Permanent Mission of Cuba to the United Nations (invited)
