

Non-Legally Binding Instruments & their relationship with international treaty law

As a contribution to International Law Week, the United Kingdom invites delegations to a side-event on the use of non-legally binding instruments.

The side-event will provide a preview of the upcoming work of the International Law Commission on this topic and feature a discussion on the distinction between a treaty and non-legally binding instruments as well as an opportunity to discuss the range of State practice in this respect.

Moderated by Sally Langrish, Legal Adviser & Director General Legal, the Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office

With Mathias Forteau, Member of the International Law Commission (participating online) and Jeremy Hill, Author of Aust's Modern Treaty Law and Practice, Fourth Edition

Tuesday, 24th October 1.15pm – 2.45pm
