Preparation of the report

1. Please indicate whether the combined fifth and sixth periodic reports were adopted by the Government and presented to the National Assembly prior to its submission.

Constitution, legislation and national machinery for the advancement of women

2. The report indicates that the Constitution provides that all citizens, regardless of sex, ethnicity, and social strata are equal before the law (p. 5). The report also notes that very few administrative cases have been filed by women for alleged gender-based discrimination. Please provide reasons for this situation, as well as information as to the type of cases filed by women who faced discrimination, and the outcome of those cases, and also indicate what administrative or other remedies are available to women victims of discrimination.

3. The report describes the “National Strategy for the Advancement of Women until 2020”, which was approved by the Prime Minister in 2002 (p. 10). Please provide updates on the implementation of the Strategy until now, including on the Action Plan on Women’s Advancement (until 2005). This should include details on progress, challenges and gaps in implementation as well as on monitoring and evaluation mechanisms of the Strategy and Action Plan, and on results achieved.

What specific measures are there to motivate men and boys to share housework?

7. The report provides little information about measures to support women and men in reconciling their family and work responsibilities. Please provide information on the types of specific measures in place to overcome obstacles for women's participation in the labour market and to facilitate the sharing of family and work responsibilities, and on the impact of such measures.

Violence against women

8. The report provides no information on legislation, policies and programmes to address all forms of violence against women, including domestic violence, rape and sexual violence. Please provide updated information on the prevalence of violence against women, including in rural areas. What kind of data is being collected on the incidence of all forms of violence against women and what do they reveal in terms of trends?

9. In its last concluding comments (A/56/38/Rev.1, para. 259), the Committee recommended training for all public officials, in particular law enforcement personnel, the judiciary and members of local committees as well as public awareness campaigns on all forms of violence against women. Please provide information whether, and how, this recommendation has been implemented.

Please specify what actions have been taken to protect the rights of victims of trafficking. Indicate what specific measures there are to address trafficking for purposes of forced marriage or marriages contracted through deceit. Please provide updated figures for the representation of women in executive positions at national, provincial and local levels.

13. According to table 6.4 (p. 70), the representation of women is nil or fairly low in some committees to the tenth National Assembly, particularly in the areas of defence and security, law, economy and budget. What measures are being taken, if any, to increase women's participation in all committees?

16. According to the report, the enrolment rate for ethnic girls is only 10 per cent (p. 29). Please indicate whether this rate suggests a positive trend and describe which steps are taken to ensure that ethnic girls enjoy equal access to education. Also indicate whether this group of girls is specifically targeted in the Plan of Action.

17. Please indicate whether information on family planning and sex education is provided in schools to girls and boys, and if not, please specify how such information is conveyed to young people.
